Washington based 'Fresh for You' Foodmaker makes and markets Crispy Chicken. Unlike the precooked and processed Crispy Chicken that consumers are familiar with, these are fresh and sold refrigerated. In 2012, the company realized that while those who tried this fresh Crispy Chicken found them delicious, very few people were aware of the brand. Charlene M Richardson, the company's Director of Marketing, found that some food chains were talking enthusiastically among themselves about her brand of Crispy Chicken. She decided to leverage it and promote the brand using electronic media.

With the help of professionals, who were already Crispy Chicken fans, 'Fresh for You' engaged a large number of people to send mails from the company's own id. The campaign was a smashing success – sale of Crispy Chicken went up by 45% compared to the previous year.

The highly impressed representatives of BarnRaisers, a provider of digital marketing solutions, asked Charlene Richardson for the tips for such a fabulous success with electronic media.

This was her reply: “Ask fundamental business questions. What are the desired results? Who do you want to attract? Where do you find them? What are the measurements that matter? If you take the time to ask and answer these questions, the right path for your business starts to reveal itself.”

Questions:

- 1) What may the reasons for choosing email as the medium of communication to promote the brand?
- 2) Why was the campaign a smashing success?
- 3) What are the 7 Cs to be observed in communication?
- 4) Which are the guidelines to be followed in sending emails?
- 5) Explain the audience – centered approach employed in the emails
- 6) Highlight the peculiar features of the product that attracted consumers
- 7) Explain the ‘you attitude’ in the mind of the sender
- 8) What did BarnRaisers want to learn from ‘Fresh for You’ Foodmaker?
